In Terms of where the Growing Global Ad spend is going, Five Companies continue to dominate. Ecommerce Business Alibaba, Google Parent Alphabet, Amazon, TikTok Owner Bytedance, and Parent of Facebook and Instagram, Meta, are predicted to attract more than Half of Global Ad spend this Year.

Retail Media is also forecast to see Notable Growth. It is also said that Financial Services will be the Fastest Growing Sector in Terms of Ad Spend in 2024. A Recent Report by WARC has shown that Global Advertising Spending is expected to rise by 4.4% this Year and 8.2% in 2024, a Boost that will see the Market top $1trn for the First Time Next Year, with just Five Companies netting over Half of the Money.

With a US Presidential Election, the Olympics, and the UEFA Men's Euros all in 2024, Major Events are expected to spur Growth. But Certain Channels are expected to lead: Social Media will be the Fastest-Growing Medium. Connected TV (CTV) is also projected to grow well Next Year.

Inflation is a Significant Concern right now. For Marketers, this Worry isn't just about Revenue, but also attached to Media Spend. What should Marketers plan to spend when so much feels Uncertain? The Answer, of course, isn't so Clear and Changes depending upon the Industry.

As the Cost-Of-Living Crisis weighs heavy on Consumers and a Potential Economic Downturn Looms, Businesses around the World are making Tough Decisions about Price points and Media Plans. Unlike the ongoing Supply Chain Issues that impact certain Products or Industries, Inflation is impacting Nearly Everyone and nearly Every Brand.

Inflationary Pressure is mirrored in the Global Advertising Market, with Media Buyers wrestling with Unprecedented Levels of Ad Cost Inflation, particularly for TV. The Question now is which Consumer Habits will stick as we emerge from the Pandemic, and what does that mean for Media Investment Strategy?
